

General Topics :: Be Gentle*Be Gentle - posted by Mattie, on: 2007/2/13 22:06

Many times I've noticed when there are members of the site inquiring about a topic in Scripture, or asking an honest question, or seeking counsel regarding something, there are some who tend to throw Scriptures at them, pound them, and almost have a religious attitude towards them like they're out of their mind.

It's not like there is a rebellion or blatant sin taking place. It's simply an inquiring heart.

We've got to be careful that as much as we need Holiness and Hell-fire preaching, we must keep ourselves from developing an in your face attitude with every soul that comes. Gentleness is fruit of the Spirit. Jesus was meek and lowly in heart.

Here are some exhortations in Scripture:

2 Timothy 2:24 "The Lord's bondservant must not be quarrelsome, but be KIND TO ALL, able to teach, patient when wronged, with GENTLENESS correcting those who are in opposition..." (if we are to be gentle in correcting those who oppose, how much more should we be gentle with those who have honest questions in life?)

Titus 3:2 "...gentle, showing consideration to all men"

Galatians 6:1 "if any man is caught in a trespass, you who are spiritual, should restore such a one in a SPIRIT OF GENTLENESS, each one looking for yourself, lest you too be tempted"

There is such a thing as righteous anger and zeal. But many who say they have righteous zeal can tend to come across more as angry, bitter and proud - concerned more about "our opinion" than the edification of the other person.

I say this in love to be more careful with inquiring hearts, some maybe even new in their walks with God. Let's take heed to how we respond.

Re: Be Gentle - posted by InTheLight (), on: 2007/2/13 22:22

Great point Mattie. This reminds me of an illustration on meekness...

Soft Answers to Rough Questions

A missionary in Jamaica was once questioning some little boys on the meaning of Matthew 5:5 and asked, "Who are the meek?" A boy answered, "Those who give soft answers to rough questions." We shall do well to remember this child's definition. The one who has wisdom in his head and heart does not need to shout at others. Wisdom speaks softly and persuasively, instead of impelling and forcing. Through the use of our tongues people will know whether we are wise or not. As that great theologian, Charles Hodge, said, "The doctrines of grace humble a man without degrading him and exalt him without inflating him."

In Christ,

Ron

Re: a mouth full of salt? - posted by ChrisJD (), on: 2007/2/13 22:28

Ron and Mattie, have recently had this verse come to mind

Let your speech be always with grace, seasoned with salt, that ye may know how ye ought to answer every man.

Re: Be Gentle - posted by Goldminer (), on: 2007/2/13 23:26

A very good admonition Mattie, thanks

Re: - posted by ChrisJD (), on: 2007/2/13 23:48

Just ran across this and hope it will be alright to add this here. From Romans 15

We then that are strong ought to bear the infirmities of the weak, and not to please ourselves.

Re: Be Gentle - posted by Koheleth, on: 2007/2/14 0:02

I give a hearty amen to a good word. Not just for others, but for myself. May I ever be so gentle, both on these forums and everywhere. What an amazing demonstration of God it would be if every conversation were gentle.

Re: - posted by John173 (), on: 2007/2/14 0:34

Out of the mouth of babes..."Who are the meek?" A boy answered, "Those who give soft answers to rough questions."

Thank you for such a gentle admonition.

In His Love,

Doug

Re: - posted by goi, on: 2007/2/14 13:47

Hi,

i am just popping in :)

This is an interesting discussion.

Very edifying thoughts.. but i ask myself:

When is the time for a "hard" word?

I believe that Jesus was gentle and meek, but sometimes he spoke a hard word. Sometimes he got loud.

And when you listen to some of the preachers on this site, i believe they are gentle, and they are wise...but some sermons are really "hard" .

When should a hard word come forth, from the pulpit and in our personal lives?

I hope you understand what i mean by a hard word.

Just one example:

A call to anguish.

Is this even our job in our personal lives to exhort people around us this way?

Well, first i have to exhort my self...

Goi

Re: - posted by myfirstLove (), on: 2007/2/14 14:11

Goi, Thanks for sharing. I believe you brought balance in the conversation.

Everything just seems to lead back into the importance of being lead by the Spirit.

Re: - posted by hmmhmm (), on: 2007/2/14 14:14

Jesus at times was as a lamb, he is also described as a lion sometimes, as said above led by the spirit...

Re: - posted by HopeinChrist, on: 2007/2/14 15:03

Quote:

-----When should a hard word come forth, from the pulpit and in our personal lives?

Hard words are often necessary, but I think they can and should be spoken with humility and love. It is much easier for the person being spoken to to receive the truth if they know the person speaking cares for them. If you care about a person you probably would rather not speak those hard words but you do it because you love them and know they need to hear it. On the other hand there are people who love to speak hard words to others. You can see the satisfaction seeking from them, but they do not speak out of love and a broken heart they speak from their prideful humanity.
Hope

Re: - posted by InTheLight (), on: 2007/2/14 15:17

Goi, if we review the original post the author is not saying there is never a time for a hard word. Here is the context of the admonition again...

Quote:
-----Many times I've noticed when there are members of the site inquiring about a topic in Scripture, or asking an honest question, or seeking counsel regarding something, there are some who tend to throw Scriptures at them, pound them, and almost have a religious attitude towards them like they're out of their mind. It's not like there is a rebellion or blatant sin taking place. It's simply an inquiring heart.

In Christ,

Ron

Re: - posted by Mattie, on: 2007/2/14 18:15

thank you for clarifying that..

yes again, i am posting this in regards to inquiring people, not those that need to be rebuked.

plus, i think if someone is supposed to get rebuked, who in the world enjoys rebuking people?

Scripture shows its difficult to rebuke. Paul wept and had a hard time at the thought of rebuking Corinth. The prophets struggled and wept and had a hard time bringing it forth.