I lost them all. Would you please help replace them?

Two years worth of resources lost. I have no one to blame, I simply forgot to save them before reformatting my hard drive. I'm speaking of my website favorites/bookmarks. Lesson learned...the hard way.

So I ask...would you please share some of your Christian resources? I think this could be beneficial for many of us. I am not biased in my resources. Devotional, historical, theological...I like it all. And don't make the mistake of thinking I, or we, probably all know about a certain one. Now that I don't have them in front of me I remember fewer than I thought I would.

Grace and peace

These are all the sites I really visit anymore and of course sermon index:

<http://www.monergism.com/>

<http://www.puritanlibrary.com/>

<http://www.puritansermons.com/>

I have a blogger that I post my misc. links on just in case I lose my hard drive.

Hi brother,

My condolences ... Have been tooling around trying to find a viable option of getting what I have up. It is literally hundreds culled through the years.

There are a couple of sites that allow you to share your bookmarks, one of them seemed to be pretty straight forward but will not take my archive.

As a reference, not necessarily an endorsement, quite a few links here;

This is exactly what I lost. The funny thing is...I managed to save everything else from my computer by transferring it on to an external hard drive the night before. I think I would have preferred to have lost anything but the bookmarks!

I love books, and have quite a few, but this experience has shown me just how much I have come to rely upon the www as a source. We should all remember not to take it for granted...we are truly blessed with a wonderful wealth of knowledge.

Thank you all!

Hey brother,

Here are a few ... Something of a disclaimer, many of these go back some years and would imagine quite a few broken links. It probably goes without saying that they are not necessarily "Favorites" as much as they are reference and the like. Some are local, others might need to be removed, haven't paid a lot attention to them as you will be able to tell by the incompleteness ...

At one point in time I set about to categorize them and didn't get very far.

If the link below works correctly you should see everything under the "All Tags" section. The method to my madness at the time was to categorize them as I mentioned and the "Unrated" folder was where I had left off at that time. Being that I was still adding more and more (and seemingly had no discipline to finish the project) I created the "AAA working folder" for the more recent ones that I continued to add. (The "AAA" was to keep it up on top of the hierarchy so I could find it). Beyond that, there is the redundancy of the "Imported" and "Bookmarks" sections that are just the replication of the whole, still getting my arms around how this all works and will try to clean it up when I do.

If anyone finds anything out of place or offensive, please let me know so I can correct it.

Re: - posted by tjservant (), on: 2008/8/11 23:54

Ah, the never ending struggle to organize ones bookmarks! It's good to know other have struggled with this as well. ;-)

My problem was that my lack of organization had actually drifted into the rest of my system. Discombobulation would best describe it. It was the reason for the complete reformat.

I have promised myself to never let things get so messy again. Pray for me!

Thank you for taking so much time brother...I truly appreciate it.
