

General Topics :: Just a question.

Just a question. - posted by GeneralJack, on: 2009/5/28 17:25

"intense" I was asking a question about your influences. I really am curious. I like what you have to say. Its much like wh at Ive learned after all the years caught up in a religious "system". I'm just a nobody on here. I'm not trying to call you out or anything like that. I understand about being defensive when it seems noone understands where your coming from. I r eally am curious about some men of God that you might read or learn under. I know the Holy Spirit is our teacher but mo st of what we learn is by the Holy Spirit speaking through a person. Preacher, teacher, evangelist, ect.....

Re: Just a question. - posted by HeartSong, on: 2009/5/28 17:32

Hi GeneralJack,

Welcome to SermonIndex!

When you are replying to a comment that someone else has made, use the "reply" button and your answer will be in line , and attached to the question.

Re: - posted by GeneralJack, on: 2009/5/28 17:51

o.k. sorry.

Quote:

HeartSong wrote:
Hi GeneralJack,

Welcome to SermonIndex!

When you are replying to a comment that someone else has made, use the "reply" button and your answer will be in line, and attached to the question.

Re: Just a question., on: 2009/5/28 18:51

Quote:

GeneralJack wrote:

"intense" I was asking a question about your influences. I really am curious. I like what you have to say. Its much like what Ive learned after all the year s caught up in a religious "system". I'm just a nobody on here. I'm not trying to call you out or anything like that. I understand about being defensive wh en it seems noone understands where your coming from. I really am curious about some men of God that you might read or learn under. I know the H oly Spirit is our teacher but most of what we learn is by the Holy Spirit speaking through a person. Preacher, teacher, evangelist, ect.....

Hi General Jack! I answered your inquiry over on the other thread where you first asked me this.

Oswald Chambers is my main reading and most anyone who contributed to his perspective. I have read all his books an d highly recommend them. Devern Fromke with his two books, "Ultimate Intention" and "Unto Full Stature" have also hel ped established me an accurate understanding the Bible. Once you get a firm foundation from these two fellows, your Bi ble read anew and I would say read and then write your own commentary to it. I hope that helps.

FWIW, I have never felt on the defensive after I have, with sincerity, explained my position to others. The defensive swit ch in me is turned off after I have done that to my satisfaction. God bless you in your endeavor to know the Lord.

. . . Ken

General Topics :: Just a question.

Re: - posted by GeneralJack, on: 2009/5/28 20:34

understood. thank you