Yeah, when are you going to open a library? Just kidding. Not like you haven't given me enough books to read!

Its nice to put a face to a name!
I now don't feel so bad about having so many books. Im glad there are others out there like me! :-)
Your doing a great work for the Lord. I'm actually in the process of carrying out the 'Freedom' cd idea out in my home to wn. It's a top idea! I'll keep you posted when it gets off the ground. I thought i would buy a day saver ticket for the buses here (theres plenty of them) and take enough for at least one per bus!

Greg is a funny little man :) My professor at school doesn't even have that many books in his own library... and he has a Doctorate!

Actually my heart felt desire is to start up a Christian library of old rare books for Christians to study from and benefit. Even to own a old used Christian bookstore would be something that I would throughly enjoy! I love going to big book sales and finding good Christian volumes at very low prices.. I just got back from a Victoria University sale and grabbed 14 old 1800 and early 1900 volumes for about 1 dollar each. And yes I love to give away books to ministers and people intersted in revival and other subjects, I usually have doubles of many paperbacks for just that purpose.

This is just what a christian couple i know are doing right now! They should be having a opening celebration soon, i cant wait to see what little gems there will be! They have some fascinating old and rare books apparently that they will show me on the night. If your ever in these parts let us know and i'll give you the address of the place. They are a lovely couple and will help you find anything your looking for.

For dwellers in the 'sceptred isle' The Evangelical Library which houses more than 80,000 evangelical books as well as an archive for many evangelical periodicals may meet some of your needs. ;-) It has a sub-branch in Smethwick in the West Midlands. The range of books probably leans fairly strongly to the Calvinist side of things but there is gold here for those we are prepared to look.

For folks more distant their 'useful links' may prove 'useful'. :-D
