

Devotional Thoughts :: Behold the Lamb*Behold the Lamb - posted by makrothumia (), on: 2010/2/19 9:44

Behold the Lamb's humility with mockers at His feet With bruise and spittle on His face His suffering near complete Behold His quiet dignity as men did laugh and scorn As blood filled eyes the shame despised beneath the crown of thorn

Behold the Lamb's meekness displayed in silence at the rod As blow by blow each stroke did know was all the will of God Behold what majesty withstood such cruelty from men
The silent intercessor groaned to pardon them from sin

Behold the Lamb silent and still while men His skin did flay Laid down His life through yielded-ness God's glory to display Behold Him stand before the crowd rejected by His own Once hailed as King by multitudes now loved by God alone

Behold the Lamb No! More than see! this nature I must know To see alone a curse would be if only for a show With tear filled eyes myself despise and all for Thee would give To share Your nature, taste Your power and in Your grace to live

makrothumia

Re: Behold the Lamb - posted by Goldminer (), on: 2010/2/19 10:51

This is so wonderful. The cross, the pain, the shame, for me. Wonderful Lover on calvary. I thank thee.

Re: - posted by Compton (), on: 2010/2/19 11:03

Makrothumia,

In all sincerity, this is an excellent poem in both spiritual depth and artistic merit. It is as affecting to me as any I've ever read. What a blessing!

MIke

Re: Behold the Lamb - posted by DBen (), on: 2010/2/19 11:45 removed post...