

Scriptures and Doctrine :: Is Scripture Memory Important?*Is Scripture Memory Important?, on: 2011/12/18 16:49

Does anyone believe scripture memory to be important? Is it better to memorize individual verses or books of the Bible? Is there any blessing to memorizing scripture

Blaine Scogin.

Re: Is Scripture Memory Important? - posted by sermonindex (), on: 2011/12/18 16:53

Dear brother,

Tremendous topic. I believe it is essential. The best way the Spirit has ministered the word of God to me over the years has been in very slowly reading and meditating on the word and this happens much when you are memorizing scripture. We need to have a love for the Scriptures that those in South Korea are who are memorizing entire books believing persecution is coming.

I believe we are in the same need in North America.

Re: - posted by PaulWest (), on: 2011/12/18 17:09

Here's a thread you might find interesting:

http://www.sermonindex.net/modules/newbb/viewtopic.php?mode=viewtopic&topic\_id=14838&forum=35&start=30&viewmode=flat&order=1

The topic is memorizing entire chapters from the Bible.

Re: Is Scripture Memory Important? - posted by SHMILY, on: 2011/12/18 17:20

I remember reading of a brother in Eretria imprisoned for his faith. He wrote scripture on any scrap of paper he could get a hold of. He had them for himself and to share with others imprisoned with him both as encouragement and for sharing the gospel.

I have a friend who was a missionary to India for many years. Storying is an important way of sharing the Word with those with a mostly oral culture. For that you must know the scripture to accurately share and question.

Our Lord had it memorized and used it not only to testify but also to rebuke Satan. The apostles quoted it. It is the "sword of the Spirit."

So I guess my question would be ~ Why on earth would you not memorize it?

Be blessed brother.
REJOICE! =)
Mary

Re: Is Scripture Memory Important? - posted by ArtB (), on: 2011/12/18 21:03

SHMILY wrote: "So I guess my question would be ~ Why on earth would you not memorize it?"

I believe it is of great value to memorize the Bible (provided one also understands each verse in the context that God intended).

My problem that inhibits my ability to memorize the scriptures is the stroke I had in September 2005. It affected my ability to remember or recall, causes me to get sleepy at varying times of the day, and my mind breaks down when trying to c ordinate several memories or lines of thought at the same time, particularly if they be complicated.

Scriptures and Doctrine :: Is Scripture Memory Important?

I depend on Biblical software that allows me to look up and search for Bible verses that I'm trying to recall and organize into a cohesive train of thought or doctrine. I depend heavily on the Holy Spirit's guidance and on prayer.

Re: - posted by roadsign (), on: 2011/12/18 21:24

Blaine, I doubt that I can add anything to the wisdom you already possess in this matter. Still, I offer some reflections – which I know is nothing new to you.

Quote:
----- Does anyone believe scripture memory to be important?
-----

I can't imagine anyone (at least in theory) saying no. Still people's actual practice might be the better judge of their views on this matter.

We would not wish to overlook the religious leaders in Jesus day who had vast amounts of scripture memorized. It was important to them – but that was no guarantee of faith and comprehension. Conversely, Jesus encountered those with very little memorized, who nevertheless were enabled to grasp the deepest essence of the gospel. As you have noted elsewhere, the Holy Spirit is quite capable of revealing truth.

In my early adulthood I memorized the verses in the Navigators Scripture memory packets. I highlighted all those verses in my bible. Since those years I have been reflecting on them as they are in their context. That has enhanced, and even changed my understanding of them. I'm grateful I did all that memory work, because now my capacity to memorize is dismal. But surely that doesn't mean that my ability to integrate those truths has deteriorated. (Hopefully that has been improving!)

Quote:
----- Is it better to memorize individual verses or books of the Bible?
-----

I wonder why there would be a need to put one over and against the other? Surely there are times and seasons for either. Or maybe there are times to focus on exegetical study instead.

Quote:
-----Is there any blessing to memorizing scripture?
-----

Again, I can hardly imagine this not to be the case! But again, we could not overlook those in Jesus' day who, despite having memorized copious scriptures, missed the greatest blessing to humanity.

Of course, it is possible that in the future we will be imprisoned for our faith, and then we may be grateful for our memory work. Still, TODAY we need scripture to be working in us – at every moment. In the end it's not the quantity of our memorized verses that will sustain us: It's our dear Lord who has promised to provide all we need to lead a godly life. We cling to him ultimately, and seek him to embed his truths in our hearts.

Having said that, I admit, I am a strong advocate of scripture memory. As long as God gives us the capacity and opportunity – it behooves us to act on that gift.

May God indeed bless you (and many others) through your diligent attention to scripture memory!

Diane

Scriptures and Doctrine :: Is Scripture Memory Important?

Re: Is Scripture Memory Important? - posted by sonsigns (), on: 2011/12/18 23:08

Yes, I believe scripture memorization is important and does have many blessings. Have you ever seen Jack Van Impe? www.jvim.org

They call him the walking bible.

I personally do not do much scripture memorization as much as I read and study the word of God. I try to read a book of the bible every three days when I read the new testament. The old testament maybe a book a every 7 days.

Re: Paul West, on: 2011/12/18 23:32

Brother thank you for sharing the link on memorizing entire chapters of the Bible. The thread was a blessing and a treasure packed with good ideas. It has encouraged me to get back into scripture memory.

Blaine Scogin

Re: All, on: 2011/12/18 23:51

Last night one of our intercessors shared a posting from Open Doors. The post shared a story of a young woman from N. Korea who escaped to China to find food. She found Christ in China and was discipled in the word. She began to have a desire to return to N. Korea and share Jesus. Knowing her Bible would be taken from her she memorized the entire book of Romans so she could share Jesus.

This has touched my spirit. I have been challenged to take up the book of Colossians and memorize it. This precious book speaks of Jesus.

Is anyone memorizing scripture? What works for you? Does anyone think we should not memorize scripture? I have heard some say believers should not memorize. I am curious as to why?

Dear God, I pray for your word to dwell richly in me in 2012.

Blaine Scogin

Re: - posted by roadsign (), on: 2011/12/19 7:31

Quote:
----- Is anyone memorizing scripture? What works for you?
-----

I memorized Romans during a 40 day fast; and at other times, I learned other chapters.

Whether I memorize or not, I lay out the content according to grammatical structure – so I could see each thought more clearly. (You'll see me doing that here sometimes.) I also use a color code. I see spiritual concepts in various colors.

Quote:
----- Does anyone think we should not memorize scripture? I have heard some say believers should not memorize. I am curious as to why?
-----

There is a justifiable concern about turning people into bible encyclopedias. These are the people who can throw out a verse for any situation – but have never learned to integrate the verses – either in the biblical contexts – or in the Christian life in general. I know people like this. Bible verses can serve as a wall of defense to keep others from getting close to their heart.

Still – as I keep finding myself repeating, I believe there is no need to put one view over and against the other!

Scriptures and Doctrine :: Is Scripture Memory Important?

PS: Blaine, Do you think my earlier post addresses this reservation regarding scripture memory?

Diane

Re: Is Scripture Memory Important? - posted by SolaVeritas, on: 2011/12/20 22:08

If you find memorizing larger passages hard, try the sermon on the mount, Mt 5-7. In Jesus' days a rabbi's disciple memorized his teaching and therefore the rabbis taught accordingly. If you dive into this sermon you will find that it is easier than many other passages to memorize because it has rhythm and repetition.

Re: - posted by jimp, on: 2011/12/21 4:56

hi, one of the first books len ravenhill ever gave me was ...john sung.it is a story of a chineses student who came to the u.s. and in three years earned an m.d. degree , learned german and english, and toward the end of this three years got saved.he was so happy in his salvation he would sing and dance on the street as he went home. the univ. he was attending had him put in a cell for a year where he memorized the bible.when he went back to china during the time of all the bible burning in china hebecame the bible of watchman nee and others in that circle .great little booklet of about 60 pages .jimp

Re: Is Scripture Memory Important? - posted by DHuff (), on: 2011/12/21 6:18

Brother Blaine - I have found Scripture Memory to be an enormous blessing, and a very helpful spiritual discipline, for all the reasons others have mentioned in this thread. About 10 years ago, I began memorizing longer portions of Scripture, and I would commend it highly to any disciple of the Lord Jesus, whether it be individual verses, longer portions, or both. It helps us think the thoughts of God, and allows us to meditate on His truth throughtout the day. As a pastor and teacher , it has helped me immeasurably in sharing and teaching God's Word, and is truly a life-transforming endeavor.

Re: All posters, on: 2011/12/21 9:31

I would like to thank all who have responded to this thread and your thoughts on scripture memory. Your post have encouraged me to take up again this discipline again after the first of the year. By the way I would commend the excellent link that Brother Paul shared earlier in this thread. This was a thread he initiated a few years ago dealing with this very topic. Even if you have read it it is worth a reread. It has a beautiful spirit to it.

Blaine

Re: What would happen???????, on: 2011/12/21 9:47

On a prayer call last Monday I heard the story of a blind pastor in Mexico. He had lost his sight due to an accident. This pastor listened to the Bible on cassette tape. In doing so he memorized large sections of the Bible, practically the whole thing. I am not sure of his methodology. But God blessed him.

This resonates in my spirit. I am 2200 legally blind. I listen to a digital Go- Bible. Great little blessing. This morning as I listened to John the question occurred to me. What would happen if one listened to say the New Testament from one to three or more hours a day. Could it be that one might be more full of Jesus whose words are spirit and life? Could it be that one might be more encouraged and built up in the word of grace? Could it be one might be more loving, patient, kind, merciful? Could it be that the quality of our threads and posts would improve in this forum?

What would happen.....

Blaine

Scriptures and Doctrine :: Is Scripture Memory Important?

Re: Again what would happen???????, on: 2011/12/22 17:40

It is estimated the average person spends anywhere from 3 to 6 hours a day in front of the TV. What would happen if we spent 3 to 6 hours a day in the word?

The persecuted believers voraciously devour the word. They spend hours a day reading it and memorizing and meditating on it. Yes I know. There is work, family, ministry, Sermon Index, oops think I stepped on some toes. But we do seem to find time for the things we value.

By God's grace I am going to make an attempt to listen to and read his word. I have spent a blessed 4 hours this day in listening to and reading his word. Guess what. I can't get enough of it. It is true. The more time you spend in the word the more you want. There is that craving for the pure spiritual milk. There is that thirsting for Jesus.

Some of you may be thinking J can't do this. You can. I am legally blind. I have cataracts in my eyes. I am 60 years old and command no seminary degree. Look if I a blind man who is theologically illiterate can get into the word so can you.

Try it. You might like it and be blessed.

From a blind man.

Blaine Scogin

Re: - posted by learjet, on: 2011/12/22 21:12

This thread motivated me to find the bible in .mp3 format. I looked on iTunes for about an hour and then searched for a free version.

Here you go, NIV in mp3 format for free:

<http://jcsn.org/1on1/NTBibleonMP3.htm>

This is actually better than you can buy because it's arranged by book and the reading is more like a story.

Be blessed!

Re: Learjet, on: 2011/12/23 9:45

Brother thanks for sharing the link. I am going to check it out. For a little over a year I have listened to the NIV New Testament on a Travellers Go-Bible. More and more it is a blessing. I know there are some marvelous phone apps that can be downloaded to enable one to listen to the scriptures in any major translation.

Because I am legally blind I qualified for the talking book program in Louisiana. I remember as a kid listening to books recorded on records. I was furnished a bulky record player to play the recorded books. Later the books went to tapes and now mp3.

I find it interesting that what was limited to blind people is now being promoted to all people as a whole. I saw an advertisement for a sight one can go to and download any type of audio book. The sight was offered as an option for people who did not have time they could listen to books on the go.

Ok. No excuse saint. How many times have we said I don't have time to read the Bible. Well how about listen to it? I have been delighting in listening to my digital Bible more and more. Love to listen to it early in the morning when it is still dark. Walk around the kitchen table with a cup of coffee and the word of Jesus going into my mind and I hope my heart.

Hey you King James folks, a blessing for you. You like Keith Daniels? Have you heard of Alexander Scorsby? Know who I am talking about? Several years ago he did a dramatic reading of the KJV which stands as the classic in Biblical recordings. I believe those recordings have been digitally remastered and a blessing to anyone who listens to them.

Come on saint. You love to listen to sermons. You find time for that. Why not listen to the Bible and be richly blessed. I know I am finding much encouragement listening to the New Testament. And frankly we need all the encouragement in the his gloomy day.

Scriptures and Doctrine :: Is Scripture Memory Important?

Blaine Scogin

Re: - posted by jimp, on: 2011/12/23 11:44

hi martyr, if you contact the lions club and tell them of your blindness and maybe the inability to pay, they will pay for cataract surgery to completely restore your sight. i did this for one eye and was wonderfully satisfied.jimp

Re: - posted by Sidewalk (), on: 2011/12/28 1:03

These are great posts regarding all of our relationships with the Word. For some, memorization is critical for discipline, some for thwarting persecutors in political oppression, and other reasons. But I would suggest that the first important thing is knowing the Word to the point that as you encounter the colorful crap the world throws at you each day you will know where God is at all times.

You will know when someone says "Money is the root of all evil! It's in the Bible!" that the Word actually speaks of the love of money, not the money itself.

By reading and rereading the gospels you will come to know how Jesus would respond to the things that come before you, whether you memorize or not. Feeling compelled to memorize the bible could become just another legalistic burden. Cramming the Word in your head is not quite the same as the Psalmist's "Thy Word have I hid in my heart, that I might not sin against thee!"

Hmmm. I must have memorized that somewhere along the way.

The more that's in your heart, the less you will need to memorize in your head.

For whatever that's worth...

Re: Is Scripture Memory Important? - posted by GaryJr (), on: 2012/1/11 15:50

I do believe memorizing Scripture is important because we can be thinking on pure things all of the time. I think it is better to memorize individual verses. The blessing to memorizing Scripture, I think, is that if satan tempts us with something wrong we can bring up that verse specifically that has to do with whatever satan is tempting us with.