Through the last few years I have been slightly aware of a general or admiral being forced into retirement, but I did not think it amounted to anything real big. Apparently, I have not been aware enough. But now, I am. Someone has been keeping count.

Seals must remove "Don't Tread on Me" flag from uniforms.

World Net Daily is a tough read, with many on the hard right in its fan base. When you read these articles, read the discussion that follows. These guys are ready to join in violent revolution, and not the kind that seeks to have a Godly repentant return to Constitutional government.

It's all guns, ammo, and go get 'em.

Not that I argue with what they are seeing, but I sense a willingness to riot and burn property that will not yield much peaceful fruit. Is this the only alternative?

Re: , on: 2013/11/6 1:19

I am not interested in the comments and I won't group them all together as you are doing. It is the content of the article that is most telling to me but you seem to want to besmirch the article by talking about the website. You can speculate about the commenters motives but we have real facts about the one who is actually doing the purging. The 197 flag officer that have been forcefully retired is what interested me. And you did not comment on that.

The other thing I read was that two former West Point male graduates were married last week in the West Point Chapel. They are no longer in the Army, yet were married at West Point. These are all just further indication of how the foundations of a society are being destroyed.

By the way, I did not read where anyone wanted to riot or burn property, but it must have only been a few commenters at most and not all of them. You have to remember that people from all over the world visit these websites and many liberals pose as conservatives so you can't believe the comments since you don't know the source behind them.

World Net Daily is a dynamic news source that picks up items that main stream media ignores, and the article covering the purge of the top ranking officers is worth reading. The idea that the American military is undergoing a monumental shift in culture and mission is a concern for the entire free world since countless nations depend on the US for their own national security. I applaud WND for their contribution to the information pool that free people need as they plan their futures.

But I am concerned with the glib attitude presented by those who add comments to the articles. It seems that there may be a willingness to strike out with violence in some of these people, and to me that is dangerous. I want to see the repentance of people turning to God and the Godly principles of the Constitution. Burning cars and tear gas in the streets- not so much.

That's all I was trying to say. Sorry it came across as something else.

I understand where you are coming from and agree with you regarding your sentiments about the comments. Sometimes I learn some really good things in the comments, though.

The other day the Drudge Report had the story of the two planes full of skydivers colliding over northern Wisconsin. One of the planes was lost, but because of the abundance of parachutes on board, everybody returned to Terra Firma safely.

Scroll down to the comments. Whooo, boy, I haven't laughed that hard in a long time, the quips and barbs just kept coming, it was hilarious!

So I guess the comment section can be worthwhile sometimes, it sure was with that one!

"just-in"

this all is a lot darker than Maloof lets on, and Obama is but a figurehead. it all has very little to do with the whole left/right, liberal/conservative, Dem/Repub scripted scrum match.

the Maloof article is half truths, and a LOT of omissions....the omissions are what cause me great concern.

here's what Maloof FAILED to mention:

<http://benswann.com/president-obama-fires-high-ranking-nuclear-chiefs/>

why?....I really don't want to go in depth on this.

i'll post two articles on who Maloof is:

<http://www.informationclearinghouse.info/article5165.htm>

<http://www.pbs.org/wgbh/pages/frontline/darkside/interviews/maloof.html>

I didn't post this to fuss or argue with you...no no no.

there are many many chess pieces all moving at once.

The one best known for high command military purges is Joseph Stalin.

http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Great_Purge

Others who conducted historic military high command purges on the scale Obama has done, and is doing, were Mao Zedong, and Adolph Hitler. Whatever side has the military control generally controls and wins the dictatorial takeover. Today we are not witnessing the national socialism of Adolf Hitler, Mao Zedong, or Joseph Stalin, but GLOBAL SOCIALISM.

Re: , on: 2013/11/8 8:32

its been reported in the alt-media, that commanders have been asked a "litmus test" question of what they will, or they wont do.

remember, these are mere men, with family, and paychecks to consider. Such issues as upholding their constitutional oath may fall by the wayside.

Re: , on: 2013/11/8 10:35

It has also been reported by commanders who have been purged. These are things they have confirmed. Not hearsay anymore. Now they are in "retirement".

Thanks for your links Neil. I will view them later, today.
