Saints just left from seeing God is not Dead. A very excellent, movie. I would rank it with Point of the Spear and Amazing Grace.

Without spoiling the ending the movie focusses upon a young college student who is forced to defend his faith in Christ in a secular philosophy class. There are sub plots that tell of faith in Christ.

The gospel of Jesus Christ is presented clearly in this movie. This would be a good evangelistic medium to share Christ

I would commend this movie. Again one of the best things coming out of Hollywood. Personally moved to tears a few times.

Oh. In keeping with the spirit if the movie. God's not dead. Might want to spread the word. Do see it. You will be encouraged. Oh. You can shed a tear or two.

Thanks for the review bear. I do plan to see it.

How was the professor portrayed?

I haven't read any secular criticisms of the movie but I suspect the argument will be that the professor didn't do a good job of arguing the other side.

Have you (or anyone) heard or read anything like this?

The professor is played by Kevin Sorbo of Hercules fame. Actually he does a good job portraying an arrogant, atheist professor. But deep down he has some personal issues toward God. I do not want to say much more lest I spoil the movie.

I read Kevin Sorbo's testimony. He accepted Christ at a Billy Graham crusade. At the height of his career he was incapacitated with an illness. This brought him closer to Christ.

I believe you will be edified when you see the movie. It reminds of the films the Billy Graham Association put out in the 60's and 70's that brought many to Christ.
