

General Topics :: be mean to a non christian?*be mean to a non christian? - posted by luckyd (), on: 2005/11/2 21:55

wow i just saw something that troubled me so much cus it opened up my eyes to how people can be. I saw the trading spouses show...for those of u that dont know what it is, 2 moms switch with the others family. Well one lady was christian and was telling these people that they are evil and all this non loving stuff cus they believed in a different religion. The family that was christian with the mom that had the different belief, well they had friends over that were christian, and the 3 christian ladys were so mean to that one mom questioning her why she wasnt christian and how she was of the devil...what can u tell people about this. i know you should say they should be loving but they will try to use biblical things and show that its ok to be mean like that to non christians. and then the christian lady was all psycho screaming and SHE looked like SHE was the devil. she screamed that they were of the devil blah blah blah going crazy. this is really awful that some christians do this stuff...so whats the best things to say to these people

Re: be mean to a non christian? - posted by letsgetbusy (), on: 2005/11/2 22:04

What is the evidence of a person being a Christian? It is not passion, fire, or anything like that. It is love, joy, peace, long suffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, and temperance. Someone may be as fired up as they can be, but how is their meekness. Do they instruct in meekness?

Now I must admit that I get fired up inside about getting sinners converted, but that is no excuse for being unkind to any one. Jesus spent time with sinners.

Now the other side is that we should not hide the truth from sinners by not discussing sin, law, righteousness, judgment, and hell. These should be discussed, but all in meekness. Not with a grovel voice and red face, but in love. So that we, like God, would not be willing that any should perish, but that all would come to repentance.

Re: - posted by Wildhorse (), on: 2005/11/2 22:16

Christians should NOT be aggressive. That in itself is a bad witness.

May I also ask what a Christian was doing on one of those rubbish TV shows anyway?

Cheers
Michael

Re: - posted by groh_frog, on: 2005/11/3 2:37

We were just talking about a similar subject in a different column, and one of the observations was that you can hate the false religion, and still love the people.

I don't necessarily agree that we shouldn't be aggressive, but our outreach must be done in love. What I mean is this: If we're too worried about hurting a person's feelings that we don't share the Word with them, then we're useless in our outreach. We must challenge their conscience- this is the purpose of the Law. But to assume that a person is evil because they believe in a false religion is wrong- there is no love, and no message that will be received.

Grace and Peace...

Re:, on: 2005/11/3 10:45

We don't usually watch that type of TV show... but we had seen an advertisement this weekend for that episode, and watched in horror last night. I won't judge this women's walk with the Lord because that show is probably so edited by the producers that many things were probably taken waaaaay out of context... HOWEVER... the behavior and attitudes of these "Christians" was appalling and sickening. I had a hard time even watching it. It was a good teaching tool for our kids though because they have never seen believers act that way. Yet many do. So after the show we pulled out our Bibles and read together about how believers should act, and how Jesus treated non-believers.

General Topics :: be mean to a non christian?

Overall... what we saw on that TV show last evening was hard to watch, and very sickening. And she cussed and said "In the name of Jesus" in the same sentence. Blasphemey.

Krispy

Re: - posted by Eli_Barnabas (), on: 2005/11/3 10:59

It's obviously a big television stunt to make Christians look bad. I'm sure there are real people like that, but the show's purpose was probably just to draw it out and make them look stupid... and they succeeded.

Glad I don't have TV (please don't respond to this statement!)
-Eli

Re: - posted by PreachParsly (), on: 2005/11/3 13:59

Quote:

-----Christians should NOT be aggressive

What do you mean by that?

aggress^{ive} adj.

1.Characterized by aggression: aggressive behavior.

2.Inclined to behave in an actively hostile fashion: an aggressive regime.

3.Assertive, bold, and energetic: an aggressive sales campaign.

4.Of or relating to an investment or approach to investing that seeks above-average returns by taking above-average risks.

5.Fast growing; tending to spread quickly and invade: an aggressive tumor.

6.Characterized by or inclined toward vigorous or intensive medical treatment: an aggressive approach to treating the infection.

7.Intense or harsh, as in color.

I looked up the definition and which of these do you think a Christian should/shouldn't be?

Re: be mean to a non christian? - posted by ginnyrose (), on: 2005/11/3 14:43

What about the sin of debate? Does it factor in here? Some time ago the LORD convicted me of this sin. It is listed in Romans 1: 29: "Being filled with all unrighteousness, fornication, wickedness, covetousness, maliciousness; full of envy, murder, debate, deceit, malignity; whisperers," I used to be 'good' in arguing but since the LORD convicted me of it, I will refrain. Does this not apply to situations as you just mentioned? I know well-meaning Christians will get frustrated when their point of view is being rejected with hostility so one responds with like and quickly you have a full blown argument going which helps nobody...and definitely the one YOU want to be convinced will remain unchanged.

Many years ago I saw a recorded debate between Randel Terry, a pro-life activist, and Faye Wattleton, who headed Planned Parenthood. Mr. Terry got so flustered and exasperated while Ms Wattleton sat there cool as a cucumber...almost regarding Mr. Terry like a pesky fly...never once raised her voice or showed her emotions. In my book her behaviour was far superior to Mr. Terry's. I thought it was a poor testimony for the pro-life position.

The point: arguing rarely convinces your opponent.

Just my thoughts...anyone disagree? :-)

General Topics :: be mean to a non christian?

ginnyrose

Re: - posted by alanrepent, on: 2005/11/3 16:08

interesting this is posted.. just a couple hours ago i was out on my campus with a banner and a girl came up to me and was telling me about that tv show and that christian lady. the lost really see those things.

Re:, on: 2005/11/3 17:04

Quote:

-----What about the sin of debate?

It would be interesting to find out the Greek word used for "debate", and what exactly the meaning is.

I have learned a lot discussing different topics on here... and yes, debating at times. Sometimes tho, we debate because of pride or wanting to be right. I think we're all guilty of that, and in that instance, that would be a sin.

Krispy

Re: - posted by Wildhorse (), on: 2005/11/3 17:22

What i meant by not being aggressive is, don't attack people directly for not being Christians, don't swear at them, don't yell at them, don't mock them and don't insult them.

Be forceful sometimes if you have too, but that is different than being out right horrible. You do need to show compassion though during witness opportunity.

Re: - posted by ginnyrose (), on: 2005/11/3 22:40

Krispy,

I do not want to offend you because I know you do not like other translations, but the NASB uses the word strife instead of debate. When I used to debate I worked hard to argue my point, leaving the opponent speechless. So I won the battle but not the war. I will still defend what I believe is right but will not become emotional, angry.

One can have a good discussion, disagree without resorting to name calling and getting angry. Seems to me when you find your anger rising you are moving into the debate/strife mode.

Just my thoughts...

ginnyrose

Re:, on: 2005/11/4 12:51

Quote:

-----Krispy,

I do not want to offend you because I know you do not like other translations, but the NASB uses the word strife instead of debate. When I used to debate I worked hard to argue my point, leaving the opponent speechless. So I won the battle but not the war. I will still defend what I believe is right but will not become emotional, angry.

One can have a good discussion, disagree without resorting to name calling and getting angry. Seems to me when you find your anger rising you are moving into the debate/strife mode.

First off... why would you think I would be offended if you brought up what another translation says? I hope I dont come off as being that sensitive... You know my stand on the KJV, but if you quote from another version it doesnt offend me or upset me. ;-) Just dont expect me to take it too seriously. :-P

General Topics :: be mean to a non christian?

Now, as for what you wrote concerning strife and debating, if you read my second paragraph, I think you'll see that we are virtually saying the same thing. So... I agree with ya.

Krispy

Re: - posted by PreachParsly (), on: 2005/11/4 16:14

Pro 25:9 Debate thy cause with thy neighbour ; and discover not a secret to another:
Pro 25:10 Lest he that heareth put thee to shame, and thine infamy turn not away.

Debate- (http://www.blueletterbible.org/tmp_dir/words/7/1131138599-6248.html) in hebrew

Rom 1:29 Being filled with all unrighteousness, fornication, wickedness, covetousness, maliciousness; full of envy, murder, debate, deceit, malignity; whisperers,

Debate- (http://www.blueletterbible.org/tmp_dir/words/2/1131138660-6644.html) in greek

Debate (in english)

To consider something; deliberate.

To engage in argument by discussing opposing points.

To engage in a formal discussion or argument. See Synonyms at discuss.

Obsolete. To fight or quarrel.

That was taken from dictionary.com

It seems since the "obsolete" definition is to fight or quarrel that the definition has changed some through time. I bet when the KJV was translated it meant the obsolete definition.

Re: greek - debate - posted by sheepshear1, on: 2005/12/7 14:58

BAUER, DANKER, ARNDT, GINGRICH - THIS THE STANDARD GREEK DICTIONARY

eris

• eris. Engagement in rivalry, esp. w. ref. to positions taken in a matter, strife, discord, contention

LIDDELL & SCOTT – THIS IS THE STANDARD SECULAR DICTIONARY

strife, quarrel, contention:

I. mostly of battle-strife,

II. generally, quarrel, strife,

1. wordy wrangling, disputation,

III. Personified, Eris, a goddess who excites to war

IV. contention, rivalry,

Re: be mean to a non christian? - posted by sheepshear1, on: 2005/12/7 15:00

BAUER, DANKER, ARNDT, GINGRICH - THIS THE STANDARD GREEK DICTIONARY

eris

• eris Engagement in rivalry, esp. w. ref. to positions taken in a matter, strife, discord, contention

LIDDELL & SCOTT – THIS IS THE STANDARD SECULAR DICTIONARY

strife, quarrel, contention:

I. mostly of battle-strife,

II. generally, quarrel, strife,

1. wordy wrangling, disputation,

III. Personified, Eris, a goddess who excites to war

IV. contention, rivalry,

General Topics :: be mean to a non christian?

Re: - posted by worzle, on: 2005/12/7 17:31

Quote:
-----What about the sin of debate? Does it factor in here? Some time ago the LORD convicted me of this sin. It is listed in Romans 1: 29 : "Being filled with all unrighteousness, fornication, wickedness, covetousness, maliciousness; full of envy, murder, debate, deceit, malignity; whisperers," I used to be 'good' in arguing but since the LORD convicted me of it, I will refrain. Does this this not apply to situations as you just mentioned? I know well-meaning Christians will get frustrated when their point of view is being rejected with hostility so one responds with like and quickly you have a full blown argument going which helps nobody...and definitely the one YOU want to be convinced will remain unchanged.

From the amplified Bible:

Acts 17:16-18

"Now while Paul was awaiting them at Athens, his spirit was grieved and roused to anger as he saw that the city was full of idols.

So he reasoned and argued in the synagogue with the Jews and those who worshiped there, and in the marketplace day after day with any who chanced to be there.

And some also of the Epicurean and Stoic philosophers encountered him and began to engage in discussion..."

Acts 17:34

"...But some men were on his side and joined him and believed (became Christians);..."

I've always taken that as debate can at least be a useful tool (if the above is indeed debate - so long as it is driven by a motivation to do God's will, and for his glory, rather than just to get one up on the person you're arguing with).