

General Topics :: Beyond Belief TeachingsBeyond Belief Teachings - posted by Nellie, on: 2005/11/6 21:45

Does anyone know anything about this?
Our Youth is going to go to one of their concerts.

The man's name is Josh McDowell, or Josh McDonell.

I really would appreciate any info on this.

Thanks, and God Bless.

Nellie

Re: Beyond Belief Teachings, on: 2005/11/6 22:59

Josh McDowell is correct.

He was a atheist turned Christian because of the undeniable facts that back up the gospel. He wrote two wonderful books, 'Evidence that demands a Verdict' Vol.I and Vol. II both are wonderful books and really make you think, 'wow there really is FACT behind the gospel, not just 100% faith.'

From glimpsing at his 'smaller' version of the 2, he is very firmly rooted in Christ. But has taken a turn for the youth. Whenever you see his name, you see a wonderful ministry. I.e. when he is being quoted about another ministry or w/e.

I think anything associated with this man, is Godly things. It blows my mind how much influence he is having upon the body of Christ.

His stats seem to be exhausted and rigorous. That he and his team put alot of effort into what they do. And, they share the info, which really shows alot about his character. He has tons of stats that will blow your mind.

Thats my 2 cents 8-) I give him 2 thumbs up. :-D

Re: - posted by sermonindex (), on: 2005/11/6 23:07

From the josh.org site:

One Million meet in small groups once a week over and above Sunday School classes.

53% attend Sunday School

61% attend Small Groups

Why such growth in small groups? Is it that they are more relational, personal and relevant? Are these small groups delivering solid biblical foundations? Will the growth continue? Will it alter the church of tomorrow?

Attendance will continue IF the substance is delivered with relevance -- modern, practical, and contextualized. Take advantage of the small group resources that are packed with relevance & substance and keep them coming back for more!

I think this brother is right on in his doctrines of christ etc.. the books that the other brother recommended: Evidence demands a verdict I had very early in my walk and its alot of great information! But his new take on culture and making the gospel culturally relevant is something I have a hard time with. I do believe that home churches and small groups are a growing way of how church will exist. But I do not think the message needs to be watered down or wrapped in an cultural overlay. This is not biblical and it really didn't happen in the days of the apostles. Everyone takes the scripture that Paul the apostle said: "I become like all men that I might save some." we have whole christian ministries and churches relying and leaning on that single verse.

General Topics :: Beyond Belief Teachings

Re: - posted by Nellie, on: 2005/11/7 9:16

Thanks to you guys.

I just hate to see our Youth get mixed up in a Doctrine that when these people are gone, they won't be rooted and grounded in the Word.

This, the rooting and grounding in the Bible is what we all need more of.

I see a lot of our Youth in our Church, trying to live the Christian life in their own strength.

They get on fire for God, and then are back into the World in just a little while.

Only God can deliver them.

In His LOVE

Nellie :-)

Re:, on: 2005/11/8 9:28

This is a "sister" ministry of mine. It's so encouraging that they are going to a conference with Josh in it. <http://www.fpts.org>

I was thinking you are going to this? Yes? Hmm, would be wonderful to connect with this ministry because they are doing wonders within the school system.